One of the greatest strengths of Rising Anthills lies in its demonstration of the “forceful form of awareness education” that the literary explorations of female genital excision also constitute. Not only does Bekers’s analysis clearly show how the creative writings from the African continent and the African diaspora effectively raise awareness about the Charity Waciuma (born 1936) is a Kenyan writer, who wrote several novels for adolescents and an autobiographical novel, Daughter of Mumbi (1969). Her work draws on Kikuyu legends and storytelling traditions. In the 1960s Waciuma and Grace Ogot became the first Kenyan women writers to be published in English.
